MCAS Yuma launches new, improved Website

MARINE CORPS AIR STATION YUMA, Ariz. (Feb. 24, 2013) – Marine Corps Air Station Yuma's new website has gone live and is now accessible to the public. This migration is a part of a Marine Corps-wide move to improve content management and distribution.

The new MCAS Yuma website is: <http://www.mcasyma.marines.mil>.

The new website will now serve as MCAS Yuma's primary internet presence. It will provide pertinent public information for anyone to access. The site features a photo gallery for viewing the latest imagery of the Marines and sailors of MCAS Yuma, an enhanced news feed for the most current Yuma stories, current air station video news, press releases, an events calendar, the weekly-updated newsletter, simplified menus for locating information and detailed information about all commands aboard the air station.

The new website functions on a template that is shared by the entire Marine Corps. This creates an easier avenue for sharing information, familiar navigation of pages across the Corps, less stringent technical skill requirements for website administrators as well as a significant reduction in operating costs.

All current news stories, photos, videos and general information will now be updated daily to the new website. The old website at www.yuma.usmc.mil will remain operational until all archived content has been made accessible on the new website, but it will no longer be updated with current content.
